My hometown is awesome!

Do you like snowy weather? Sapporo, my hometown, is famous for very heavy snow. When I woke up today, the temperature was minus seven degrees. I wanted to stay in bed, but my sister came and asked me to go skiing. I love skiing, so I quickly got dressed. Sometimes there is so much snow that I can't get to school. But it's not cold all year. In summer it can be warm and sunny. Perfect for trekking.

Sapporo is the fifth biggest city in Japan, and there are great places to visit. Last month I went to a chocolate factory with my family. We went on a tour and they showed us how they make chocolate. I tried some and it was totally delicious! Then we took a walk in one of many amazing parks in Sapporo.

There is a mountain close to my home called Moiwayama. Last summer I went on a trip there with my friends. It was absolutely boiling when we climbed the mountain, so it took a long time to reach the top. We rested and drank water every thirty minutes. I was quite worried when it started to get dark.

I didn't want to be on the mountain at night, but it was all OK in the end. We got back home when it was still light. The views from the top were amazing and I love looking at the photos I took. Thinking about that day makes me feel great. Every year in February there is a special event in Sapporo – the Snow Festival. It started more than seventy years ago, and now teams from more than twenty countries come to create sculptures. You can see sculptures made from snow and ice all around the city. Last year one team created a really amazing Star Wars sculpture. It was my favorite!
